A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT - Alan Boyd

How often have you complimented your dog on how smart he or she is? I know we have. Recently, there has been an increased interest in the intelligence of animals. Articles in newspapers and magazines describe the behavior of pets; travelers talk about what they have seen while traveling in exotic places. Most of these references are anecdotal, including our own. I am sure we all have stories to tell about our own pets.

A recent column by the editor of The Week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the translation of the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the translation of the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the sad look on his dog's face after a new Way in the week magazine described the week magazine

3 WAYS TO KEEP UP WITH THE EMERITI!

We get calls or emails from our members who want to know "What's going on at the Emeriti luncheons?" "Have I missed a special program?" "Do you have my correct information?" Our answers to any of these questions are easy:

- 1) Check the Emeriti website at www.ohio.edu/emeriti for monthly Newsletters, members data, and other facts about the Emeriti.
- 2) Join the Ohio University Emeriti LISTSERV where we send notices and special announcements by way of an
